FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

South African Poet Speaks From His Heart About Human Resilience

Former newspaper editor Kaizer Mabhilidi Nyatsumba wrote this book because of his love of poetry and to strike a literary blow against racism in South Africa, his native country.

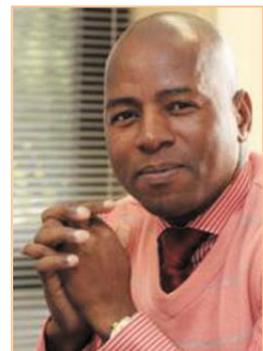

First published in 1990, four years before Nelson Mandela assumed the presidency of a democratic South Africa, When Darkness Falls boldly captures the spirit of resistance shown by black South Africans in the face of the brutal apartheid system.

In its very moving words, this poetry collection – which boldly anticipated a future without apartheid – tells of a people’s determination to live, love and laugh even under the most difficult conditions. Nelson Mandela would be proud.

“We are pleased to announce the release of this stunning book of poetry that not only offers a fascinating look back at history, but also takes us to a time when apartheid in South Africa was just beginning to rattle its chains,” said Robert Fletcher,

CEO of Strategic Book Publishing and Rights Agency.

About the Author: Kaizer Mabhilidi Nyatsumba was born in White River in the province of Mpumalanga, South Africa. He went to school there and later moved to the province of KwaZulu-Natal for high school and university. He earned a scholarship to study at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., where some of the poems in this book were written. He has also studied, worked and lived in the United Kingdom. The author is currently Chief Executive Officer of the Steel and Engineering Industries Federation of Southern Africa in Johannesburg. This was his first book published and it is now being republished for a bigger, international market.
