Heartfelt Novel Looks at Choice of Home Care vs. Nursing Home

She Presents Well is a fictional story that delves into the issues we all have to face about elder care. What would you do if the decision was about your mother or father?

This book considers the options that families have, including providing home care rather than the 24/7 care offered in a nursing home. It tells of George, Verna, Doris, and other elders who have been admitted over time to their final residence, St. Matthew Nursing Home. They are there due to dementia or other debilitating conditions.

Each of the characters questions how they landed here, as they live out their final days in this unfamiliar place. Some are content, while others are desperate to go home. Their family members are woven into the story, discussing their guilt and their reasoning for choosing a nursing home. The staff of St. Matthew also presents their frustrations as well as their passion to do the right thing. Where do you stand on elder care?

About the Author: A native of Buffalo, New York, Kenneth J. Smith came to Boston for college and stayed 31 years. He has an undergraduate degree in human development from Boston College and a master's in health care management from Lesley University. "I have been a home health administrator and a nursing facility administrator, and have volunteered in nursing facilities for many years. I have always wanted to tell the story of why and how elders are admitted to nursing facilities, and how these decisions impact them and their families." The author lives in Boston with his partner of 17 years.
